Itinerary content

Good morning, Taipei! Start a wonderful day!

We will go to the historic Grand Hotel Taipei. This five-star hotel was built in the 1950s to entertain foreign guests and hold state banquets. The hotel has majestic red pillars and golden tiles, a magnificent classical atmosphere, and conveys the beauty of traditional art. It is one of the representative landmarks of Taipei City and is of great historical significance.

Then visit the world-famous Palace Museum, which is one of the museums with the largest collection of Chinese cultural relics in the world. It has a collection of nearly 700,000 ancient Chinese cultural relics and works of art, covering the artistic creations of more than 8,000 dynasties from the Neolithic Age to the present.

Next, we will go to Dadaocheng District, which combines tradition and modernity and has a diverse style. With Dihua Street as the center, there are traditional dry goods stores and Chinese medicine stores on both sides of the street. The unique style of the old houses here has attracted many coffee shops and small art exhibitions. The collision of new creations and nostalgia has created dazzling sparks. In recent years, this has become a good place for domestic and foreign tourists to visit Taipei and seek to explore emerging cultural and creative industries.

Then we came to Chenggenmen (North Gate) which is a short drive away. This gate is one of the five ancient city gates in Taipei City. It was built in the Qing Dynasty. It is also the only gate among the five that has completely preserved its original appearance during the city's construction period.

At noon, we came to the bustling Ximending business district. The shops here are densely packed with various forms. Whether it is worshipping the five internal organs temple or buying souvenirs, everything can be done here at once. Therefore, it attracts many international tourists. There will also be street performers performing from time to time. If you happen to encounter one, you might as well stop and enjoy the vibrant downtown area of Taipei.

In the afternoon, we arrived at Lungshan Temple, which is not only the oldest temple in Taipei City, but also a national historic site. Here, the tour guide will take you to learn about Taiwan's traditional folk belief culture. You can also experience throwing a fork to ask for fortune, and ask the gods for guidance on health, career, love, etc.

The next stop was the Chiang Kai-shek Memorial Hall, which was built to commemorate the first president of the Republic of China, Chiang Kai-shek. The exterior of the building is mainly white walls, and the roof tiles are decorated with royal blue glazed tiles. The park includes archways, museums, squares and gardens. It is grand and majestic, leaving a deep impression on visiting tourists.

Appreciating the guard handover ceremony, the uniform movements and the solemn atmosphere, one can't help but feel awe.

At the end of the trip, we will visit Taipei 101, which was once one of the tallest buildings in the world. The Taipei 101 floor is about 508 meters high and is also the most representative landmark in Taipei. It has a unique architectural style that travelers to Taipei must not miss. If time permits, you can go to the observation deck on the 89th floor at your own expense to enjoy the magnificent scenery of Taipei from high altitude and enjoy an all-round excellent view.

After the trip, you can choose to return to the original meeting point, MRT Zhongxiao Xinsheng Station, or get off at the Raohe Street Tourist Night Market to end this wonderful and unique day.
