Angkor Thom is the last main city of the ancient capital of Angkor. Its Khmer name means "Great City". The city, located in present-day Cambodia, was founded by King Jayavarman VII at the end of the twelfth century. Greater Angkor covers an area of 9 square kilometers, located north of Angkor Wat. The park preserves several early monuments as well as monuments established by Jayavarman and his successors. The center of the city is the Bayon Temple, the national temple of Jayavarman. Other major sites are gathered around Victory Square, which includes a series of ruins of ancient capitals established by various dynasties: the Sky Palace rebuilt by Suryavarman I, the Bapuang Temple built by Udayadedovarman II, the Bayon Temple established by Jayavarman VII, the Elephant Platform and the King's Platform, etc. The ruins complex is one of the most popular tourist attractions in Southeast Asia.

[Bengmi column] Located about 40 kilometers east of Angkor Wat, it is a huge temple that has not yet been restored. It is also one of the most mysterious and difficult-to-reach temples in the Angkor heritage complex. The entire ruins are buried in the forest and continue to collapse. There are large rocks scattered and collapsed everywhere. It is impossible to see the whole thing, but the original and dilapidated atmosphere also shows that it is unique. It is the first Hindu temple built entirely of sand and stone in the Angkor complex. However, due to its relatively remote location and poor protection, many Beng Meili sculptures have been stolen. It is said that the animated film "Castle in the Sky" directed by Hayao Miyazaki was based on Bengmeili. Its uniqueness also attracts photography enthusiasts from all over the world to shoot. [Banteay Srei], which means "Women's Castle", also translated as Queen's Palace and Bandislay, is a Hindu temple located next to Lychee Mountain (Phnom Dei) about 21 kilometers northeast of Angkor, Cambodia. It is dedicated to Shiva, one of the three gods of Brahmanism. It was built in 967 by the dynasty of Rajendravarman II and completed in 1002 by the dynasty of Jayavarman V. The Queen's Palace is mainly dedicated to the Hindu god Shiva - the master of the three worlds. However, the building of Queen's Palace now seems to be divided into two parts: the part south of the east-west axis is dedicated to Shiva, while the building to the north is dedicated to Vishnu. The Queen's Palace faces east from the west and is 200 meters long and about 100 meters wide. There are three layers of red sandstone walls inside and outside. [Cambodia Landmine Museum] Established in 1997 by Aki Ra, a local demining expert, the museum tells the history of landmines. Proceeds from ticket sales are used to support the lives of people with disabilities. Aki Ra saw the shocking bloodshed and the killings among compatriots during the demining process, so he decided to raise his own funds to open a landmine museum, hoping that more people could understand the harm caused by war and landmines.

Visit the main local shrines of Preah Ang Chhek and Preah Ang Chom to learn about the local beliefs and culture, then we continue to visit Wat Damnak, one of the most beautiful pagodas in the city, with French colonial architecture and a large garden full of statues that reflect its history. Opened in 2007, the Angkor National Museum offers a comprehensive collection of Cambodian artifacts, showcasing the origins of Khmer art, culture and architecture. It has eight exhibition halls that provide in-depth coverage of the history of Cambodia and the Khmer Empire, as well as a fascinating collection of Buddhist artifacts. Enhance your understanding of Khmer history and culture with lectures by a Khmer archaeologist with over 11 years of experience in the field. He has been working for the World Monuments Fund on projects including Angkor Wat. He is also a lecturer at the School of Archeology at Royal Roads University. If time permits, visit the Old Market.

[Independence Palace is also called the Reunification Palace] Built in 1966, it covers an area of 120,000 square meters and is a huge four-story white building. It was the seat of the presidential palace of the former South Vietnam regime. There are 100 magnificent large and small halls in the building, which can meet various needs such as diplomacy, banquets, residence, and military command. On April 30, 1975, the North Vietnamese People's Liberation Army entered the Reunification Palace and planted the flag of the People's Liberation Army, marking the end of the long Vietnamese Civil War. The furnishings in the palace remain as they were on the day of the invasion. 【Notre Dame Cathedral in Ho Chi Minh City】 Because it is built with red bricks, it is also called the Red Church and is the most famous landmark in Ho Chi Minh City. The Red Church was built in 1883 and is a souvenir from the French colonial period. The architectural shape is well-proportioned, solemn and majestic. The two 40-meter-high bell towers soar into the sky, imitating the design of the bell tower of Notre Dame de Paris. All the red bricks used to build the church were shipped from France and have not faded at all. 【post Office】 It was built by France from 1886 to 1891 and officially opened in 1892. At that time this was part of French Indochina. The Post Office is built in Gothic style, and its designer and builder was the famous architect Gustave Eiffel. This building has become a well-known attraction in Ho Chi Minh City. At the appointed time, go to the airport with new feelings and memories. The tour guide will assist in the departure procedures and fly back to your place of origin; ending this journey of beautiful time.
